

Dear FCC and other interested parties,
Now that information flow and entertainment programming has fallen into the hands of just a few behemoth media conglomerates. None of which seem to be interested serving the public interest anymore. I found it necessary to subscribe to XM Satellite Radio. They have found a way to provide the information and programming that I find value in, so much so I gladly pay for their service.

Isn't the idea of building a better mousetrap and being rewarded for it, the foundation of the freedoms we hold dear in this country? If the commercial broadcasters in this country would actually provide the services I get from my Satellite Radio I would not have to pay for something that should be free.

I remember when Radio stations were granted a license "to serve the public interest". When they stopped doing that so they could line their profits, they invited others to fill that void.

Satellite radio does that, and in my opinion, it would be a crime to deny them the freedom to continue, or prevent me from obtaining their services.

Thank You,

Mark Ziino
